About the webinar: For the last few months COVID-19 pandemic is a great concern for Government, common people and different healthcare institution throughout the world. But due to different opinion about different types of drugs and it's use to prevent COVID-19 and also lack of vaccine ;(because several universities and pharma companies throughout the world are trying to develop vaccine) COVID-19, slowly engulfed the world. On the basis of this present scenario, Bioinformatics act as one of the effective tool which not only analyze the viral data which provide vital information about genetic makeup of the virus but also aid in the development of specific drug and vaccines against COVID-19.
